CONNECTOR: Your job is to make connections to the text your group is reading. You can make connections to your own life experiences (text-to-self), connections to other text, such as books, articles, websites (text-to-text) and/or connections to the outside world, including events at school or in the community, current events or happenings that occurred in other times and places (text-to-world). Any connections you make should be significant and help you gain deeper understanding of the text you're reading.

Record your connections and thoughts on the chart below. Be prepared to share them with your group when your Literature Circle meets.
