PASSAGE PICKER: Your job is to choose parts from the text that you want to discuss with your group. When selecting your passages, choose parts of the text that stand out to you: parts that are interesting, confusing, important, funny, exciting or different. You will read the passage to your group and explain why you chose it. After you share, your group members will have a chance to share their thoughts about the passage. When choosing a passage, think about ways you can help yourself and your group deepen your understanding of the text. Is there a part that is confusing? Then choose it- the discussion you have with your group members may help you understand it better. Choose passages that highlight the use of a literary device, that are engaging or entertaining, or that made you think. Be ready to explain why you chose the passages(s) you did. Record your thoughts on the chart below.
